

Lineage No.: ALEXANDRIA 04

Group Title: American Literary Advertiser

---

Variant 01: American Literary Advertiser

Publication Data: March 27, 1802 to November 18, 1802 Weekly

Proprietors: J. Lyon & R. Dinmore

IVP Associates: James Lyon (274), Richard Dinmore (139)

Notes: Successor to Lyon's failed National Magazine or Cabinet of the United States (Oct. 1801 to Jan. 1802), issued from his former Franklin Press office in Washington, by the new firm he formed with Dinmore, a teacher & bookseller in the capital. The weekly was relocated to Alexandria when the pair moved their office there after buying the Columbian Advertiser of James D. Westcott on November 22, 1802, leading to a four-week suspension of this title during the reorganization.

Variant 02: American Literary Advertiser

Publication Data: December 16, 1802 to after March 20, 1804 Weekly

Proprietors: J. Lyon & R. Dinmore

IVP Associates: James Lyon (274), Richard Dinmore (139)

Notes: The Washington firm of Lyon & Dinmore bought the Columbian Advertiser, the Alexandria paper of J. D. Westcott, on November 22, 1802; the relocation of their press office and the reorganization of their business led to a four-week suspension of the Literary Advertiser; when publication resumed, it was issued from Alexandria. The journal ceased sometime between March 20, 1804, the date of the last known issue, and August 27, 1804, the date of the formal dissolution of the Lyon & Dinmore concern.
